

THE CALLING: A MEDICAL SCHOOL JOURNEY

Meet the Moderator and Panelists

RUTGERS-NEW BRUNSWICK

The Samuel DeWitt Proctor Institute
for Leadership, Equity, and Justice

Graduate School of Education

Tim Smith Executive Producer

Tim is an award-winning television and documentary executive whose career spans MSNBC, PBS NewsHour, HBO, NBC, NOVA, Frontline, and National Geographic. A two-time Emmy Award winner, Tim brings decades of experience telling stories that examine critical issues impacting society.

Le'Shauna Phinazee Film Participant

Le'Shauna was born and raised in New York, where she received an academic scholarship to attend Bowdoin College. Following undergrad, she graduated Albert Einstein College of Medicine in 2023. Le'Shauna is now in her fourth year of residency at Duke University Medical Center, interested in pursuing a career in breast and abdominal radiology.

Luckson Omoaregba Guest Speaker

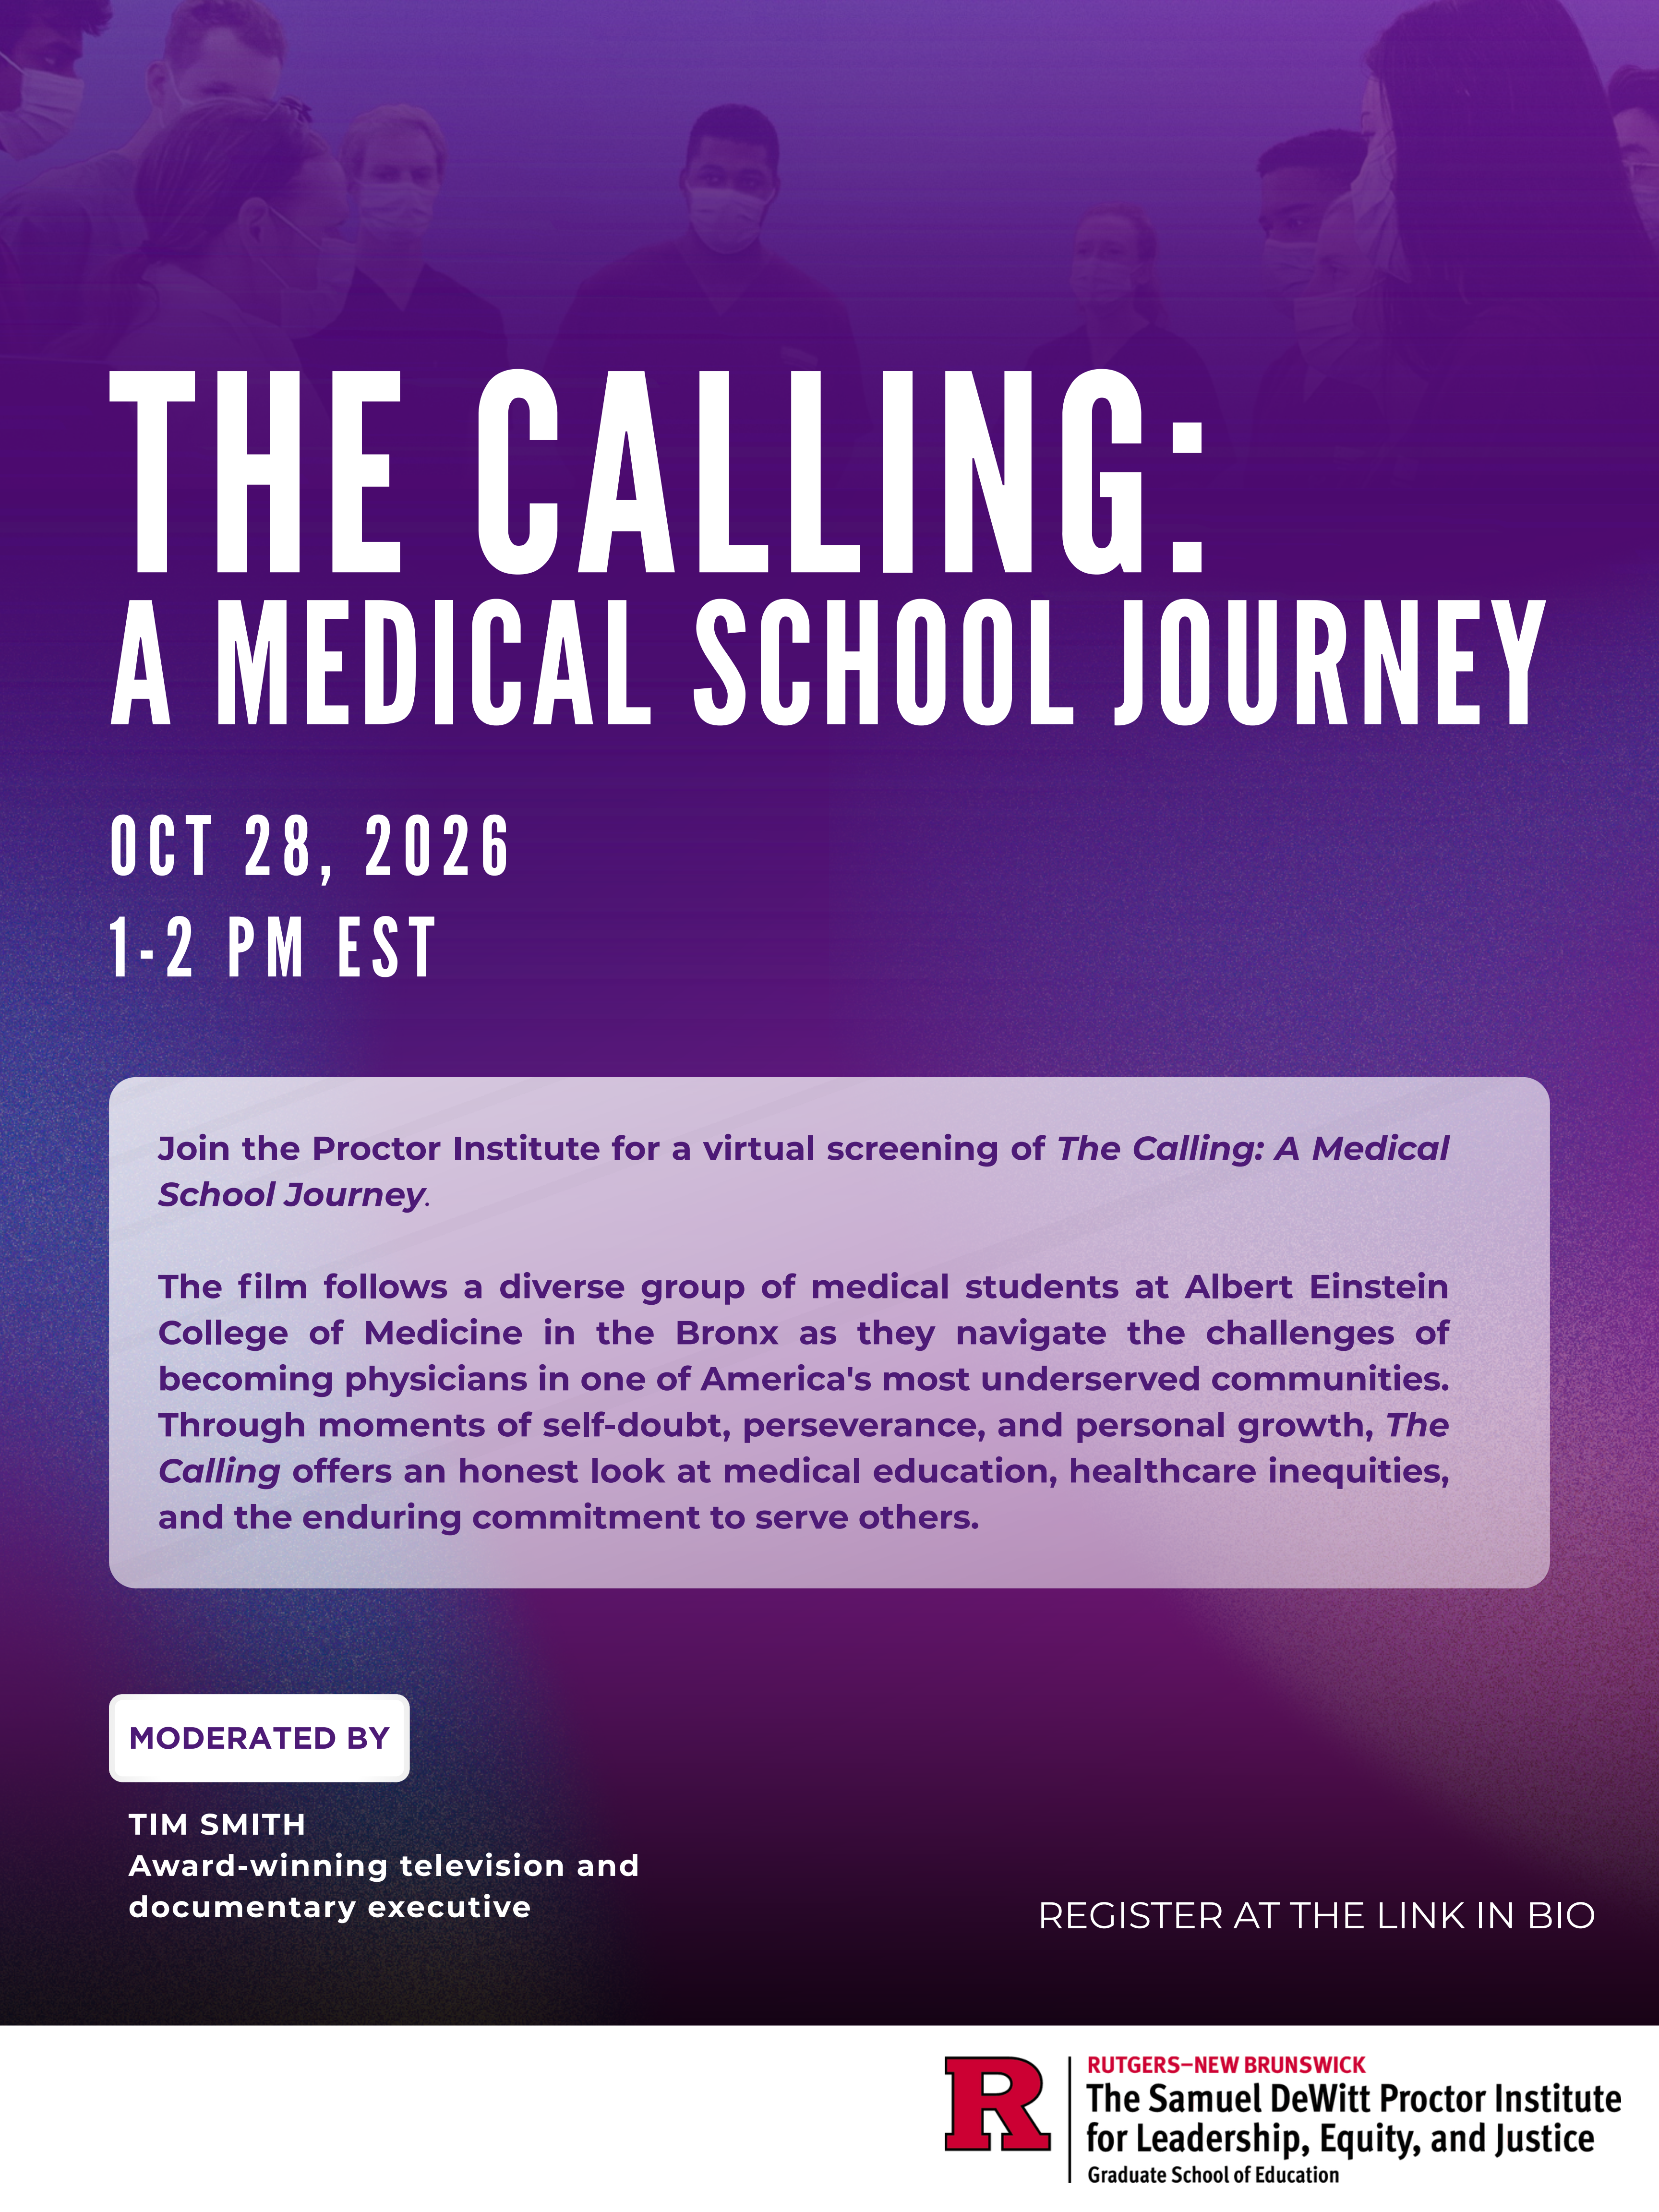

Luckson is the Director of Pathway Programs at The Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University, where he works to expand equity, access, and inclusion in medical education. Luckson leads pipeline programs designed to increase the representation of individuals from historically underrepresented communities in medicine and other health professions.

RUTGERS-NEW BRUNSWICK

The Samuel DeWitt Proctor Institute
for Leadership, Equity, and Justice

Graduate School of Education

THE CALLING: A MEDICAL SCHOOL JOURNEY

OCT 28, 2026
1-2 PM EST

Join the Proctor Institute for a virtual screening of The Calling: A Medical School Journey.

The film follows a diverse group of medical students at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in the Bronx as they navigate the challenges of becoming physicians in one of America's most underserved communities. Through moments of self-doubt, perseverance, and personal growth, The Calling offers an honest look at medical education, healthcare inequities, and the enduring commitment to serve others.

MODERATED BY

TIM SMITH

Award-winning television and documentary executive

REGISTER AT THE LINK IN BIO

RUTGERS-NEW BRUNSWICK

The Samuel DeWitt Proctor Institute
for Leadership, Equity, and Justice
Graduate School of Education

THE CALLING: A MEDICAL SCHOOL JOURNEY

OCT 28, 2026
1-2 PM EST

Join the Proctor Institute for a virtual screening of The Calling: A Medical School Journey.

The film follows a diverse group of medical students at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in the Bronx as they navigate the challenges of becoming physicians in one of America's most underserved communities. Through moments of self-doubt, perseverance, and personal growth, The Calling offers an honest look at medical education, healthcare inequities, and the enduring commitment to serve others.

MODERATED BY

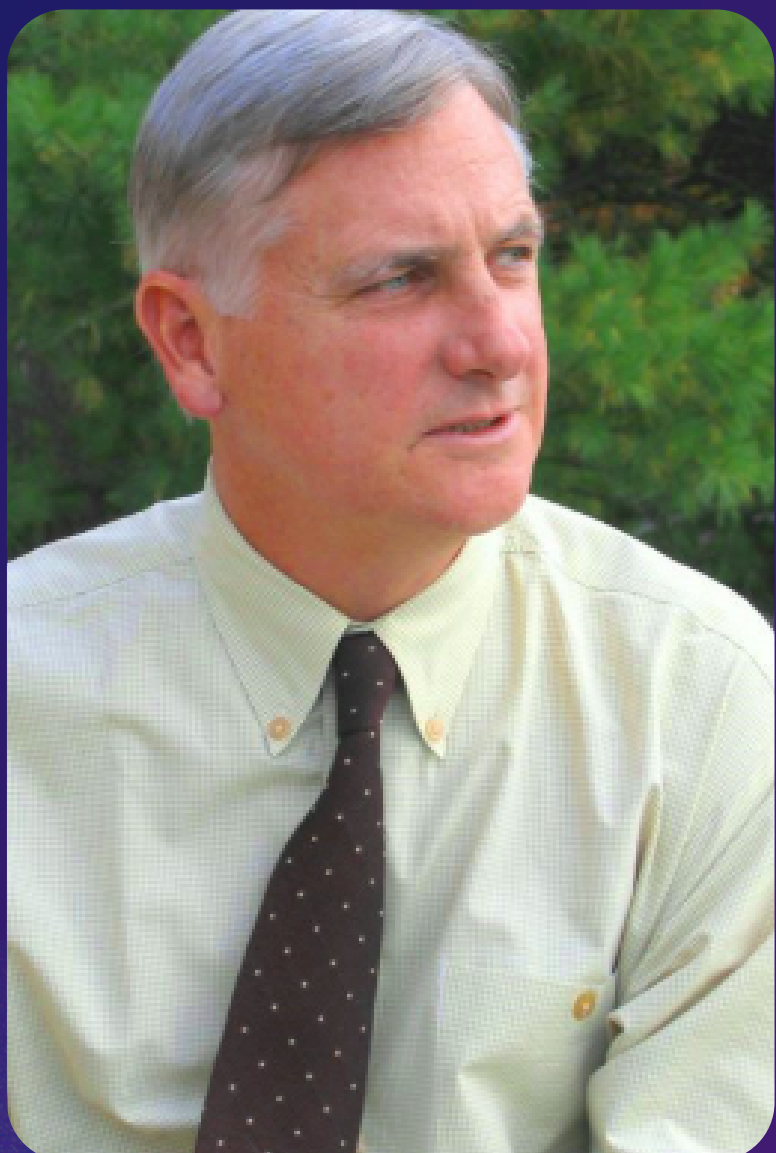

TIM SMITH

Award-winning television and
documentary executive

RUTGERS-NEW BRUNSWICK

The Samuel DeWitt Proctor Institute
for Leadership, Equity, and Justice
Graduate School of Education

Tim Smith Executive Producer

Tim is an award-winning television and documentary executive whose career spans MSNBC, PBS NewsHour, HBO, NBC, NOVA, Frontline, and National Geographic. A two-time Emmy Award winner, Tim brings decades of experience telling stories that examine critical issues impacting society.

Le'Shauna Phinazee Film Participant

Le'Shauna is a fourth-year medical student and future radiologist from New York City. A graduate of Bowdoin College, where she majored in mathematics on the pre-med track, Le'Shauna has dedicated her work to expanding access to healthcare and inspiring young people from underrepresented communities to pursue careers in medicine.

Luckson Omoaregba Guest Speaker

Luckson is the Director of Pathway Programs at The Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University, where he works to expand equity, access, and inclusion in medical education. Luckson leads pipeline programs designed to increase the representation of individuals from historically underrepresented communities in medicine and other health professions.

RUTGERS-NEW BRUNSWICK

The Samuel DeWitt Proctor Institute
for Leadership, Equity, and Justice

Graduate School of Education