THE FORGOTTEN MIGRATION: THE BLACK STRUGGLE FOR GRADUATE EDUCATION IN THE AGE OF JIM CROW

WITH CRYSTAL R. SANDERS

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 2021
3:00 PM - 4:30 PM ET

At this event, Crystal R. Sanders will examine the experiences of Black southerners, compelled to leave their home states and families in pursuit of graduate training. In addition to shedding light on the high personal costs Black students endured by leaving the only land they knew, Sanders will discuss how the practice of exporting Black scholars stifled the curricular development of public Black colleges.

Crystal R. Sanders is an Associate Professor of History and an award-winning historian. She is also the former Director of the Africana Research Center at Pennsylvania State University. Her research and teaching interests include African American History, Black Women's History, and the History of Black Education.
