

THE LATINX GUIDE TO GRADUATE SCHOOL: DISMANTLING THE HIDDEN CURRICULUM

Latinx students in higher education are often made to feel less than and as though they are imposters. This troubling dynamic can make it difficult to ask questions, to seek clarification, or to find mentorship in graduate school. In this interactive session, Genevieve Negrón-Gonzales and Magdalena L. Barrera, co-authors of The Latinx Guide to Graduate School, will lead a candid conversation about the hidden curriculum of graduate education that impacts Latinx and first-generation students' access to, persistence in, and graduation from advanced degree programs. This session will provide participants with an understanding of how to leverage their existing cultural wealth and academic strengths to not only survive, but also thrive in graduate school.
