

REPARATIVE JUSTICE, RACIAL RESTORATION, & EDUCATION SERIES

Making It Plain with Dr. Key

By Narketta Sparkman-Key

Marvin Chiles, assistant professor of African American History at Old Dominion University, joins Sparkman-Key for a discussion of the 1619 project. In this episode, Sparkman-Key shares her experience interviewing Nikole Hannah-Jones while exploring critical Black history truths and myths.

LISTEN HERE

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Narketta Sparkman-Key is an Associate Professor of Counseling and Human Services and Director of Faculty Diversity and Retention at Old Dominion University. She began the podcast, “Making It Plain with Dr. Key” to build awareness of issues that impact Black communities, Black families and Black women. She bridges the gap between scholarly research and community need by delivering both information and solutions in a relatable way. Sparkman-Key is a visionary in her field and believes her purpose is to support effective teaching, advance culturally competent service delivery, and advocate for the empowerment of vulnerable populations.

